

HOUSE RULES

1. All visitors must always behave in a manner that does not disturb the activities of the Fair. In particular, visitors shall not disturb or harass any other individuals. The Organiser reserves the right to conduct searches of individuals, personal items and bags in the interest of safety and security. Vehicles within the exhibition site may be searched with no obligation to provide justification. In addition to cargo area control measures, containers and bags transported by individuals are also subject to security searches. Individuals that refuse to submit to a search may be escorted from the exhibition grounds.

It is expressly forbidden to set up stands or displays within the exhibition site, whether inside or out of doors, without a rental contract and/or specific, written approval of the management of Frankfurt Book Fair. It is forbidden to carry items that can disrupt an event or endanger individuals. Any gross violation of these House Rules can result in permanent banning from the Fair without reimbursement.

2. The Fair can be closed to the public if its ability to operate is in any way endangered. In such a case, the Fair is not obliged to reimburse entrance fees. The Fair accepts no liability for property damage or physical injury to visitors resulting from third-parties acting in violation of their contracts.
3. Please also be aware that the exhibition site is monitored by video in the interest of safety and security.
4. Frankfurter Buchmesse GmbH and other third parties acting on behalf of the Frankfurt Book Fair have the right to take photographs and make video recordings for reporting, advertising and documentation. Visitors and other persons shall not hamper or prevent such photography or video recordings. By entering the exhibition site, you consent to appear in photographs and videos, whether or not they are made public.
5. Smoking is not permitted anywhere within the halls.
6. In addition to the House Rules of Frankfurter Buchmesse GmbH, the House Rules of Messe Frankfurt must be adhered to in their entirety.